sequential. The key is managing. One of the problems besetting contemporary policing, as managers everywhere rue-fully recognize, is that the new computer-based information systems pour out data that are not used. Unmanaged informa-tion systems are like the legendary sorcerer's apprentice madly producing data that bury consumers.

Issues such as school reform, inclusion, standards assessment, disability classification, and many others can all be viewed from multiple perspectives. Strong opinions and research are there to support or question all of these differing viewpoints. Special education is a charged, subjective topic just as any complex and personal issue is.
