An interesting couple of e-mails from Gilbert Grant, arising from the extract from Rouse's book on Teaching Latin by the Direct Method that is on the web site, alerted me to Francois Gouin, of whom I had not heard. Google took me straight away to this fascinating extract from a book by a Mr Brown on methods of language learning.

Gouin - ARLT

The direct method of teaching, which is sometimes called the natural method, and is often (but not exclusively) used in teaching foreign languages, refrains from using the learners' native language and uses only the target language. It was established in England around 1900 and contrasts with the grammar-translation method & Bilingual method of teaching and other traditional approaches, as ...

Direct method (education) - Wikipedia

The grammar-translation method is a method of teaching foreign languages derived from the classical (sometimes called traditional) method of teaching Greek and Latin. In grammar-translation classes, students learn grammatical rules and then apply those rules by translating sentences between the target language and the native language. Advanced students may be required to translate whole ...

Dr. Paul Pimsleur devoted his life to language teaching and testing and was one of the world's leading experts in applied linguistics. After years of experience and research, Dr. Pimsleur developed The Pimsleur Method based on two key principles: the Principle of Anticipation and a scientific principle of memory training that he called "Graduated Interval Recall."
